 - Other (explain) _____

2. The facts of this case are:

I have a pininterest page. I changed it around Feb 5th of 2015. Before I put all the celebrity stuff up. I changed my screen name from Keyonna Ferrell to K Ferrell and my web url was also changed. The email I have of the exact day I did all this is vague but its in feb the other email I have of exact proof is in march both are copied below. The problem is yahoo Has a suammry of a a summary I had o pininterest for one week in the beginning of feb and then took it down. If you click on the link the page s outdated the web url is outdated. The email proves when it was changed. Almost 3 months ago. Yahoos articles and the yahoo person I talked to said it takes 6-8 weeks it been nearly three months. The summary was a joke meant in jest but people not knowing that will take it the wrong way. I have emails That I have sent to yahoo and a phone conversation I recorded. There is also a video of what looks to be a high school kid dancing to a provocative song. I first requested this be removed the end of 2014 it was removed and then put back up. Removed once I emailed again and then put back up. Once the celebrities stuff went off they were unwilling to take it down. And tried to lie and say I was using the wrong email.Me having to sue search engines is ridiculous BUT that's defamation of character Im a Christina woman and half of this crap I wouldn't do unless I was married. Ive contacted these people over and over again and my whole LIFE is watching. Yahoo and google are defaming my character.

Sweetheart dont start with me. Me changing my name from Keyonna Ferrell to K Ferrell implies I want privaacy. I wasnt aware my name was in the address bar.However my profile appears on a webscreen or ANYWHERE it should appear

THAT way everywhere. I have a RIGHT to know whats displayed WHERE. I dont care if it is public information me changing my name to KFERRELL implies I want privacy. You brought attention to it. Equal to me spilling coffee on my shirt you taking a picture and putting it on the web. Fallback. You;re done. There is nothing you can say you changed your settings to bring attention to my first name. I can SUE YOU. And I WILL. Get anothr job this aint it. We are done talking. Abowface.

Hi Keyonna,

That was your public username that was shown. It has been your username since you signed up. The way we formatted profiles on the iPhone changes, but your username has always been in the link to your profile.

For example, now it's www.pinterest.com/kferrell050388/ (what it looks like on a computer or the mobile web) and before it was www.pinterest.com/keyonnaferrell. It was public information to begin with and thus not a privacy concern. And since you changed your username, everything seems to be fine for you now.

Best,

Remove search results from Yahoo Search

Yahoo Search displays Web results from around the internet. These include results from Yahoo websites, and non Yahoo websites.

Good to know: When you're requesting that a specific search result be removed from Yahoo Search, it's important to know whether the result is from a Yahoo website, or a non-Yahoo website. Yahoo has no control over what is published outside of the Yahoo network.

Search results from non Yahoo websites

If the search result you want removed is a non-Yahoo webpage, we recommend first contacting that website's owner, content provider, or domain provider with your request.

- A website's contact info is often located on the website itself.
- You can look up a website's domain provider through services like WhoIs.net.

When will Yahoo Search remove a result that a website's unpublished?

After a non-Yahoo website has updated their content, Yahoo Search will reflect the update after our next content refresh cycle completes (up to 6-8 weeks). Until then, you'll still see the result in question in Yahoo Search results.

What if my personal info is published?

If a website contains personally identifiable information, known as "PII" (like a social security number, or credit card number), then Yahoo may be able to remove the info from our search results, even though we can't control the website where it's published.

See our support options for more assistance. You'll need to provide the personal info being displayed so we can investigate.

Personal names aren't unique: Several people may have the same name. So Yahoo Search results with content about a different person, with the same name as you, may not be subject to change or removal.

FAQ

Question: What if the info that I'd like removed is no longer published on a website, but that info still shows up in Yahoo Search?

Answer: Yahoo Search results that "reference" a Web page that is no longer published will automatically be removed from the Yahoo Search results during the next refresh. This refresh occurs regularly and automatically, and can take up to 6-8 weeks.

Clean up your search results: With Yahoo Search SafeSearch, you can filter out explicit, inappropriate, and adult-oriented content.
