1 MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORITIES

3 I. INTRODUCTION

4 Anthony Levandowski is not a party to this action, and we have no basis to believe that 5 he is presently under criminal investigation. But given the explosive nature of the accusations 6 raised against him in this case, and the possibility that an investigation could be initiated at some 7 later date, any prudent person in Mr. Levandowski's circumstances would be wise to ensure that 8 his constitutional rights remain fully protected. As the Supreme Court has emphasized for 9 decades, the core purpose of the Fifth Amendment's guarantee is not to shield the guilty, but "to 10 protect innocent men . . . 'who otherwise might be ensnared by ambiguous circumstances.'" Ohio v. Reiner, 532 U.S. 17, 21 (2001) (quoting Grunewald v. United States, 353 U.S. 391, 421 11 (1957)). Further, because the Fifth Amendment's protections turn not "upon the likelihood, but 12 upon the possibility, of prosecution," In re Master Key Litig., 507 F.2d 292, 293 (9th Cir. 1974), 13 the Fifth Amendment can be implicated even in a civil lawsuit when no criminal investigation 14 has been—or ever will be—initiated.

15
16 Mr. Levandowski is requesting a modification of the Court's standing privilege log 17 requirement. If applied in its usual fashion, the Court's requirement would improperly compel 18 Uber to disclose information protected by a common interest privilege and thereby undermine 19 Mr. Levandowski's Fifth Amendment right against compelled production as recognized by the 20 Supreme Court in United States v. Hubbell, 530 U.S. 27 (2000), and Fisher v. United States, 425
21 U.S. 391 (1976). In making this request, Mr. Levandowski relies upon the following well-settled 22 principles of law:

- 23
- A client's confidential communications with his attorney are protected by the attorney-client privilege. Baird v. Koerner, 279 F.2d 623, 629-30 (9th Cir. 1960).
  - A client's potentially incriminatory communications to his attorney, whether explicit or implicit, are further protected against compelled disclosure by the Fifth Amendment.

27 Fisher, 425 U.S. at 405.

- 1 • The Fifth Amendment prohibits a court from compelling a person to produce records or 2 information if that act of production would tacitly communicate a “link in a chain” to 3 evidence a prosecutor might use to build a case. Hoffman v. United States, 341 U.S. 479, 4 486 (1951); Doe v. United States, 487 U.S. 201, 208 n. 6 (1988); Hubbell, 530 U.S. at 38.
- 5 • When an attorney shares his client’s potentially incriminatory communications in the 6 context of a joint defense agreement creating a common interest privilege, all counsel 7 who are parties to that agreement must maintain the confidentiality of those 8 communications. United States v. Gonzalez, 669 F.3d 974, 978 (9th Cir. 2012).

9 The immediate issue before the Court is precisely how detailed Uber’s counsel must be in 10 listing on its privilege log the “due diligence report prepared by a third party that may (or may 11 not) have referenced the collection of allegedly downloaded documents.” Dkt. #132 at 1:16-18
12 (emphasis added). In reliance on his rights under Hubbell and Fisher, Mr. Levandowski asks 13 that Uber’s counsel—because of its common interest confidentiality obligations to Mr.
14 Levandowski—be relieved of any obligation to provide detail concerning (1) the identity of the 15 third-party who conducted any such due diligence review, (2) whether Mr. Levandowski 16 possessed any documents that were reviewed by the third party, or (3) the identity of any of Mr.
17 Levandowski’s possessions that may have been reviewed.

18 This is necessary for two reasons. First, ordering public disclosure of these facts on the 19 privilege log would impair Mr. Levandowski’s attorney-client privilege because it would compel 20 disclosure of confidences shared by Mr. Levandowski with his own counsel that were later 21 communicated with other counsel as part of an enforceable joint defense and common interest 22 privilege agreement. Second, requiring disclosure of these facts would separately violate Mr.
23 Levandowski’s Fifth Amendment right not to be compelled to reveal the existence, location, 24 possession, or identity of any documents that might furnish a link in a chain of possible 25 incrimination.

26 In similar circumstances, courts have recognized that it is improper to compel a degree of 27 detail in a privilege log where, as here, such detail would tacitly disclose testimony protected by 28

1 the privilege against self-incrimination. See United States SEC v. Chin, Civil Action No. 12-cv-2 01336-PAB-BNB, 2012 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 182252, at *16-17 (D. Colo. Nov. 29, 2012) (finding 3 that the Fifth Amendment and Hubbell prohibit requiring a respondent to submit a privilege log 4 that lays out the tacit testimony inherent in production); In re Syncor ERISA Litig., 229 F.R.D.
5 636, 649 (C.D. Cal. 2005) (rejecting a motion to compel a privilege log because “requiring 6 defendant [] to produce a privilege log listing responsive documents may incriminate defendant 7 [] by forcing him to ‘admit that the documents exist, are in his possession or control, and are 8 authentic.’”).

9 On behalf of Mr. Levandowski, we respectfully ask for the same accommodation here.

11 II. PROCEDURAL BACKGROUND

12 A. Court order to Uber to produce documents from Mr. Levandowski

13 In April 2016, Anthony Levandowski, Ottomotto LLC, Otto Trucking LLC, Lior Ron, 14 Uber Technologies, Inc., and their respective attorneys entered into a “Joint Defense, Common 15 Interest and Confidentiality Agreement” in connection with Uber’s proposed acquisition (at that 16 time) of Ottomotto and Otto Trucking. Declaration of John Gardner at ¶ 3 & Ex. A. Under the 17 agreement—which establishes a common interest privilege that Mr. Levandowski now asserts—18 a due diligence report was produced by a third party. Id. at ¶ 4; see also Gonzalez, 669 F.3d at 19 978 (9th Cir. 2012).

20 In March 2017, Waymo sued Uber, Ottomotto, and Otto Trucking, alleging among other 21 things that Mr. Levandowski stole trade secrets when he stopped working for Waymo and went 22 to work for Uber in its autonomous-driving car program. Dkt. #23 at ¶10. Waymo sought 23 expedited discovery and a preliminary injunction. Dkt. #24. The Court ordered expedited 24 discovery, and specifically ordered Uber to produce, among other things, “all files and 25 documents downloaded by Anthony Levandowski . . . before leaving plaintiff’s payroll and 26 thereafter taken by them.” Dkt. #61 at 3, ¶ 4.

1 B. This Court's requirements of a detailed privilege log

2 To the extent that Uber intends to assert any privilege over documents, Federal Rule of 3 Civil Procedure 26(b)(5) and this Court's standing orders requires prompt production of a 4 privilege log containing the following information:

5 Privilege logs shall be promptly provided and must be sufficiently detailed and 6 informative to justify the privilege. See FRCP 26(b)(5). No generalized claims of 7 privilege or work-product protection shall be permitted. With respect to each 8 communication for which a claim of privilege or work product is made, the asserting 9 party must at the time of assertion identify:

10 (a) all persons making or receiving the privileged or protected 11 communication;

12 (b) the steps taken to ensure the confidentiality of the communication, 13 including affirmation that no unauthorized persons have received the 14 communication;

15 (c) the date of the communication; and 16 (d) the subject matter of the communication.

17 Failure to furnish this information at the time of the assertion will be deemed a waiver of 18 the privilege or protection. The log should also indicate, as stated above, the location 19 where the document was found.

20 Supp. Order to Setting Initial Case Management Conference in Civil Cases Before Judge 21 William Alsup at ¶ 16; see also FED. R. CIV. PROC. 26(b)(5).

22 On March 29, 2017, the undersigned advised the Court that a privilege log in this form 23 would violate Mr. Levandowski's Fifth Amendment right against self-incrimination, as 24 interpreted by the Hubbell and Fisher line of cases. 3/29/17 Trans. at 5-6, 9-10. Specifically, the 25 undersigned noted that a privilege log in this form would reveal the existence, location, or 26

1 possession of evidence that Mr. Levandowski may possess and control that is of relevance to this 2 action. Id.

3 The undersigned further noted that, to the extent Uber received information protected 4 from disclosure by the Fifth Amendment, the company cannot disclose it because “counsel who 5 acquires knowledge as part of a common interest agreement stands in the same shoes as counsel 6 for an individual.” Id. at 25:6-12. Arturo Gonzalez, counsel for Uber, echoed this concern, 7 stating he wanted to discuss how to provide a privilege log “without infringing upon a Fifth 8 Amendment right.” Id. at 12-13. Mr. Gonzalez noted that Uber intended to identify a due 9 diligence report on the privilege log, but was unsure whether to name the third party who 10 prepared it. Id.

11 The undersigned asked to brief the question. Id. at 25:19-21. He also asserted Mr.
12 Levandowski’s “Fifth Amendment [act of] production rights under United States v. Hubbell,” 13 and made clear that Mr. Levandowski objected “to the disclosure of any confidential information 14 that was acquired as part of a common interest privilege.” Id. at 26:18-23.

15 This Court’s March 31, 2017 order followed; it allows Mr. Levandowski to move under 16 the Fifth Amendment to “suspend the production or the privilege log requirement.”<sup>1</sup> Dkt. #132.

17 18 III. ARGUMENT:

19 THE FIFTH AMENDMENT PROTECTS MR. LEVANDOWSKI FROM HAVING 20 HIS LAWYERS—WHETHER DIRECT OR JOINT DEFENSE—REVEAL 21 CONFIDENCES THAT MIGHT INCRIMINATE HIM.

22 A. Under The Fifth Amendment A Person May Not Be Compelled To Testify 23 Against Himself.

24 The Fifth Amendment privilege not to be a witness against oneself is a central tenet of 25 our democracy. Quinn v. United States, 349 U.S. 155, 161 (1955). “[A]ny compulsory 26 <sup>1</sup> In response to this Court’s Order of March 31, 2017, counsel for Mr. Levandowski has briefed the 27 application of the Fifth Amendment (which, here, arises from a common interest privilege) to the 28 production of the third party report and any required privilege log notations for this report. This motion does not brief any other privileges that may apply to the production of all or any portion of the third party report, all of which are expressly reserved.

1 discovery by extorting the party's oath . . . to convict him of crime . . . is contrary to the 2 principles of a free government . . . . It may suit the purposes of despotic power, but it cannot 3 abide the pure atmosphere of political liberty and personal freedom." Malloy v. Hogan, 378 U.S.
4 1, 9 n.7 (1964).

5 1. This Fifth Amendment protections are broadly construed and apply 6 to any testimony that could provide a link in the chain of evidence.

7 Given its importance to our criminal justice system, "[t]his provision of the [Fifth] 8 Amendment must be accorded liberal construction in favor of the right it was intended to 9 secure." Hoffman v. United States, 341 U.S. 479, 486 (1951). A person can invoke the Fifth 10 Amendment's protections in any proceeding—be it "civil, criminal, administrative, judicial, 11 investigative or adjudicatory." Doe ex rel. Rudy-Glanzer v. Glanzer, 232 F.3d 1258, 1263 (9th 12 Cir. 2000). In the civil context, "the invocation of the privilege is limited to those circumstances 13 in which the person invoking the privilege reasonably believes that his disclosures could be used 14 in a criminal prosecution, or could lead to other evidence that could be used in that manner." Id.
15 The "privilege against self-incrimination does not depend upon the likelihood, but upon the 16 possibility, of prosecution and also covers those circumstances where the disclosures would not 17 be directly incriminating, but could provide an indirect link to incriminating evidence." Id.
18 (emphasis in original).

19 Courts have found that the privilege applies when an answer could:

- 20 • "[P]rovide an indirect link to incriminating evidence[.]" Doe ex rel. Rudy-Glanzer, 232 21 F.3d at 1263.
- 22 • "[P]rovide a lead or clue to evidence having a tendency to incriminate." United States v.
23 Neff, 615 F.2d 1235, 1239 (9th Cir. 1980).
- 24 • Disclose "a fact that could serve as a link in a chain of circumstantial evidence from 25 which guilt might be inferred" or a "fact" that "might furnish a lead to a bit of evidence 26 useful to the prosecution." Maffie v. United States, 209 F.2d 225, 228 (1st Cir. 1954).

- 1 • “[G]ive a prosecutor a starting point from which he might proceed step by step to link the 2 witness with criminal offenses.” J.C. Penney Life Ins. Co. v. Houghton, Civ. A. No. 86-3 2637, 1986 WL 14732, at *3 (E.D.Pa. Dec. 24, 1986).

4 In short, the link-in-the-chain test is “broadly protective,” United States v. Chandler, 380
5 F.2d 993, 1000 (2d Cir. 1967), and must be “liberally construed” by the courts. Id. at 997.

6 2. Fisher and Hubbell make clear that the Fifth Amendment protects 7 implicit testimony inherent in the act of producing documents in response to 8 a court order or a subpoena

9 In Fisher v. United States, the Supreme Court ruled that an individual can invoke the 10 Fifth Amendment privilege in responding to a request for the production of documents. The 11 Court held that, even when the content of a document itself is not privileged, the act of producing 12 the document may be, because the act of producing evidence in response to a subpoena “has 13 communicative aspects of its own, wholly aside from the contents of the papers produced.” 425 14 U.S. 391, 410 (1976). In other words, when producing documents, a person tacitly testifies 15 about (1) the actual existence of the papers demanded, (2) their possession or control by the 16 witness, as well as the location of the documents, and (3) the witness’s belief that the papers are 17 those described in the subpoena. Id. The Supreme Court reaffirmed this holding and the act-of-18 production privilege in United States v. Hubbell, 530 U.S. 27, 32-36 (2000) (holding that, in 19 response to a subpoena for documents, the subpoenaed party may refuse to produce because “the 20 act of production itself may implicitly communicate statements of fact,” such as an admission 21 that “the papers existed, were in the [witness’s] possession or control, and were authentic”).

22 The Fifth Amendment’s protection regarding an act of production applies with equal 23 force even if the witness himself no longer possesses the documents sought, but rather has turned 24 the documents over to his attorneys and their agents in order to get legal advice. Fisher, 425 U.S.
25 at 405 (holding that “the papers, if unobtainable by summons from the client, are unobtainable 26 by summons directed to the attorney by reason of the attorney-client privilege.”). “The thrust of 27 the Fifth Amendment is that ‘prosecutors are forced to search for independent evidence instead 28 of relying upon proof extracted from individuals by force of law.’” United States v. Judson, 322

1 F.2d 460, 466 (9th Cir. 1963) (quoting United States v. White, 322 U.S. 694, 698 (1944)). ““It 2 follows, then, that when the client himself would be privileged from production of the document, 3 either as a party at common law . . . or as exempt from self-incrimination, the attorney having 4 possession of the document is not bound to produce.”” Fisher, 425 U.S. at 404. The fact that an 5 individual furnished documents to his lawyer to obtain effective representation does not create an 6 independent source from which to obtain those documents; rather, the lawyer stands in the shoes 7 of his client when it comes to invoking the Fifth Amendment privilege. Absent a grant of 8 immunity, a court cannot compel an individual, or his attorney, to make a production that could 9 be used to build a case against him. Hubbell, 530 U.S. at 45 (“Given our conclusion that 10 respondent’s act of production had a testimonial aspect, at least with respect to the existence and 11 location of the documents sought by the Government’s subpoena, respondent could not be 12 compelled to produce those documents without first receiving a grant of immunity under § 13 6003.”)

14 B. The Attorney-Client Privilege And The Duty Of Confidentiality Preclude An 15 Attorney From Revealing Incriminating Communications That His Client Has 16 Revealed In Confidence.

17 Confidential communications between an attorney and his client are privileged. Fisher, 18 425 U.S. at 403 (citing 8 J. Wigmore, Evidence § 2292 (McNaughton rev. 1961)). An attorney 19 must keep these communications secret unless a client waives the privilege. Perrignon v. Bergen 20 Brunswick Corp., 77 F.R.D. 455, 459-60 (N.D. Cal. 1978).

21 This Court also requires that all lawyers practicing before it adhere to the California 22 Rules of Professional Conduct, see NDCA Civil Local Rule 11-4 (requiring that any attorney 23 practicing in the court be “familiar and comply with the standards of professional conduct 24 required of members of the State Bar of California”), which even more broadly obligate 25 attorneys to resist disclosing any “confidences” or “secrets” of their clients. Both California 26 statutory law and the California Rules of Professional Conduct mandate that lawyers “maintain 27 inviolate the confidence, and at every peril to himself or herself . . . preserve the secrets, of his 28

1 or her client.” Cal. Bus. & Prof. Code § 6068(e)(1) (emphasis added); accord Cal. Rules of 2 Prof’l Conduct R. 3-100(A) (“A member shall not reveal information protected from disclosure 3 by Business & Professions Code § 6068(e)(1) without the informed consent of the client.”).

4 The duty not to disclose client “confidences” and “secrets” is virtually absolute and much 5 broader in scope than privilege. See Vapnek et. al., CAL. PRACTICE GUIDE: PROFESSIONAL 6 RESPONSIBILITY (The Rutter Group 2016) §7:26; see also Cal. State Bar Formal Opn. No. 2003-7 161 (a California attorney’s ethical duty of confidentiality under §6068(e) protects “all 8 information gained in the professional relationship that the client has requested be kept secret or 9 the disclosure of which would likely be harmful or embarrassing to the client.”) In short, if a 10 client does not permit disclosure, then disclosure must be avoided unless an appropriate court 11 order is obtained by the requesting party. CAL. PRACTICE GUIDE: PROFESSIONAL 12 RESPONSIBILITY, at §§ 7:86, 7:103-106. To avoid violating the duty of confidentiality, a lawyer 13 must not disclose any client confidences unless and until the court has determined that an 14 exception to §6068(e)(1) applies. Id. at § 7:88.

15 C. A Common-Interest Privilege Extends The Attorney-Client Privilege And 16 Duty Of Confidentiality To Counsel Representing Third Parties

17 In general, the disclosure to a third party of attorney-client communications destroys any 18 privilege that might otherwise attach to such communications. But that rule does not hold when 19 the privilege holder and the third party share a common legal interest with respect to the subject 20 matter of the communication and enter into their own agreement of confidentiality. See, e.g., 21 Gonzalez, 669 F.3d at 978. This extension of the attorney-client privilege, known as a “common 22 interest privilege,” “applies where (1) the communication is made by separate parties in the 23 course of a matter of common interest; (2) the communication is designed to further that effort; 24 and (3) the privilege has not been waived.” United States v. Bergonzi, 216 F.R.D. 487, 495 25 (N.D. Cal. 2003); see also United States v. Henke, 222 F.3d 633, 637 (9th Cir. 2000) (existence 26 of a joint defense agreement extends the attorney-client privilege to create an implied attorney-27 client relationship between the codefendants and their counsel).

1 One party to a joint defense agreement “cannot unilaterally waive the privilege for other 2 holders.” Gonzalez, 669 F.3d at 982; In re Grand Jury Subpoenas, 902 F.2d 244, 250 (4th Cir.
3 1990) (holding that all documents related to common claim “are subject to a joint defense 4 privilege that [one party] may not waive unilaterally”). Courts recognize that allowing unilateral 5 waiver of confidential communications by one party without the consent of the others “would 6 likely severely undermine the rationale for the joint defense privilege in the first place.”
7 Gonzalez, 669 F.3d at 983.

8 A common interest or joint defense agreement is permissible in many circumstances. It 9 does not need to be in writing; it “may be implied from conduct and situation, such as attorneys 10 exchanging confidential communications from clients who are or potentially may be 11 codefendants or have common interests in litigation.” Gonzalez, 669 F.3d at 979 (internal 12 citations omitted). Nor does it matter whether the litigation in question is civil or criminal, or 13 even whether the parties would align on the same side of the pleadings. Id. (citing In re Grand 14 Jury Subpoenas, 902 F.2d 244, 249 (4th Cir. 1990)). Indeed, the joint defense privilege applies 15 even if litigation is not in the offing at the time of the agreement between the parties. Nidec 16 Corp. v. Victor Co., 249 F.R.D. 575, 578 (N.D. Cal. 2007) (“The protection of the privilege 17 under the community of interest rationale [] is not limited to joint litigation preparation efforts.
18 It is applicable whenever parties with common interests join forces for the purpose of obtaining 19 more effective legal assistance.”). In all of these circumstances, it is sufficient that the legal 20 interests of the parties invoking the privilege are aligned. See Holmes v. Collection Bureau of 21 America Ltd., No. C 09-02540 WHA, 2010 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 4253, 2010 WL 143484 (N.D. Cal.
22 Jan. 8, 2010) (finding joint defense privilege where “counsel for both defendants submitted 23 sworn declarations that they agreed to pursue a joint defense strategy . . . and to communicate 24 with each other regarding their shared legal interests”).

25 Courts have expressly held that information shared between individuals and companies in 26 the context of a potential acquisition can fall within the ambit of a common interest privilege’s 27 protections. See, e.g., Hewlett-Packard Co. v. Bausch & Lomb, Inc., 115 F.R.D. 308, 310, 312 28

1 (N.D. Cal. 1987) (no waiver of attorney-client privilege when defendant, Bausch & Lomb, 2 disclosed a patent opinion letter to a nonparty during negotiations for the purchase of a division
3 of Bausch & Lomb); OXY Res. Cal. LLC v. Superior Court, 115 Cal. App. 4th 874, 898-899 4 (2004) (the common interest “nonwaiver principle” applies to information disclosed in pre-5 acquisition communications). The determinative factor is whether the communication was 6 “designed to further a joint legal effort” or “in the course of formulating a common legal 7 strategy.” See Nidec Corp., 249 F.R.D. at 579 (discussing Hewlett-Packard Co. v. Bausch &
8 Lomb, Inc.); see also OXY Res. Cal. LLC, 115 Cal. App. 4th at 898-99.

9 Here, there is no question that a valid joint defense agreement exists between Mr.
10 Levandowski and Uber. It was memorialized in writing and is attached as Exhibit A to the 11 Declaration of Mr. Levandowski’s attorney, John Gardner. That agreement was entered into for 12 the express purpose of protecting communications made in the course of an ongoing joint effort 13 to defend against “potential investigations, litigation, and/or other proceedings relating to the 14 proposed transaction between Ottomotto, Otto Trucking and Uber and/or any affiliates of Uber.” 15 Ex. A to Gardner Declaration at 1. In keeping with that purpose, the agreement contains an 16 unconditional promise that the signatories would keep any documents shared under the 17 agreement secret. Id. ¶¶ 2-5.

18 D. Requiring A Detailed Privilege Log Here Would Violate Mr. Levandowski’s
19 Fifth Amendment Privilege

20 The basic purpose of a privilege log is to provide information sufficient for other parties 21 and the court to assess whether an asserted privilege applies, but without actually disclosing the 22 information protected by the privilege itself. Thus, Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 26(b)(5)(ii) 23 provides that privilege logs must “describe the nature of the documents, communications, or 24 tangible things not produced or disclosed . . . without revealing information itself privileged or 25 protected . . .” (emphasis added).

26 In the ordinary case, where no Fifth Amendment act-of-production right has been 27 invoked, the detailed information required by this Court’s standing order can be provided

1 without revealing the privileged or protected content of the information for which protection is 2 sought. But the situation presented here is different—because public disclosure of even such 3 commonplace details as whether a document exists, who may have possessed it, or where it is 4 located would divulge information that the Fifth Amendment protects. See Fisher, 425 U.S. at 5 410.

6 Accordingly, courts hold that the requirement of a detailed privileged log must yield to 7 the constitutional right to be free from forced self-incrimination. See Chin, 2012 U.S. Dist.
8 LEXIS 182252, at *26; In re Syncor ERISA Litig., 229 F.R.D. at 649; see also In re Fustolo, No.
9 13-12692-JNF, 2015 WL 9595421, at *1, 5 (Bankr. D. Mass. Dec. 31, 2015) (implicitly 10 accepting argument that a privilege log would undermine right against self-incrimination by 11 modifying the privilege log requirement).

12 As the Court noted in its March 31, 2017 order, Uber’s counsel has already indicated in 13 open court that, “prior to the acquisition of Otto Trucking LLC and Ottomoto LLC, Uber 14 Technologies, Inc. obtained a due diligence report prepared by a third party that may (or may 15 not) have referenced the collection of allegedly downloaded documents.” Dkt. #132 at 1:16-18
16 (emphasis added). Adding further detail to this disclosure is precisely what threatens Mr.
17 Levandowski’s Hubbell and Fisher rights. To the extent that Mr. Levandowski may have 18 produced any documents for review by a third party hired by counsel for the common purpose of 19 obtaining legal advice, his doing so would have conveyed the same implicit testimony that 20 accompanies every act of production—namely, a tacit assertion that documents exist, that they 21 were within his possession, and that they were responsive to a request or question posed as part 22 of the privileged due diligence effort.

23 What the Hubbell and Fisher line of cases teach, at bottom, is that there is no meaningful 24 constitutional difference between “saying something” with words and “saying something” with 25 the act of production. Hence, any testimonial communications that Mr. Levandowski made 26 through his act of production to his own counsel, and then to any other counsel bound by a 27 common interest privilege, are twice-protected against court-ordered disclosure. These 28

1 communications are protected by the attorney-client privilege, as extended through the common 2 interest privilege here, and they are protected further under the Fifth Amendment. The Court 3 cannot, consistent with the Fifth Amendment, order Mr. Levandowski—or any counsel owing 4 obligations of attorney-client confidentiality to him—to disclose information that could furnish a 5 “link in the chain” to the existence, possession, location, or identity of evidence that may be used 6 in any possible criminal prosecution of Mr. Levandowski.

7 Plaintiffs are certainly free to use any legitimate tools of civil discovery to locate 8 evidence they deem relevant to their civil lawsuit. But they are not free to use the power and 9 authority of this Court to order disclosures that are protected under Mr. Levandowski’s Fifth 10 Amendment rights. Thus, absent an order granting Mr. Levandowski immunity coextensive with 11 18 U.S.C. § 6002 or a showing by the government that it already knew of the existence, location, 12 possession, and identity of such documents with a degree of particularity rendering each question 13 a “foregone conclusion,” any order compelling Uber’s counsel to disclose these confidential 14 testimonial communications on a privilege log would run afoul of the Fifth Amendment. See 15 United States v. Bright, 596 F.3d 683, 692 (9th Cir. 2010) (It is only “[w]here the existence and 16 location of the documents are a foregone conclusion and the individual adds little or nothing to 17 the sum total of the Government’s information by conceding that he in fact has the documents . .
18 . that enforcement of the summons’ does not touch upon constitutional rights.”).

19 E. This Court Should Modify Its Order To Suspend The Requirements Of A 20 Privilege Log For Any Documents Protected By The Fifth Amendment.

21 The Court’s order to Uber—which by its terms would require the company to produce 22 any documents (to the extent it received any) that Mr. Levandowski produced under a common-23 interest privilege—would violate Mr. Levandowski’s Fifth Amendment rights. With respect to 24 any such documents, this Court should modify its order to require only disclosure of information 25 sufficient to establish (a) the existence of a common-interest agreement between Mr.
26 Levandowski and Uber, and (b) that Mr. Levandowski provided information to the third-party 27 conducting due diligence under the agreement. Uber should not be required to disclose 28

1 information regarding the location of any protected document, including the name of the third-2 party vendor, or the subject matter beyond noting “due diligence report.” Requiring Uber to 3 provide this information would violate the Fifth Amendment as those details could serve as a 4 link in the chain for the government to obtain the report and use it in any criminal investigation 5 of Mr. Levandowski. Hubbell, 530 at 45 (information regarding “the existence and location of 6 the documents sought” is protected by the Fifth Amendment).

7 To the extent the Court requires additional information from Mr. Levandowski relating to 8 Fifth Amendment privilege issues, Mr. Levandowski is prepared to submit the information in 9 camera and ex parte, a procedure that is approved by the Ninth Circuit. See, e.g., United States v.
10 Drollinger, 80 F.3d 389, 393 (9th Cir. 1996).

IV. CONCLUSION

To properly protect Mr. Levandowski's Fifth Amendment rights, this Court must modify the normal requirements of a privilege log with respect to the third-party due diligence report. Without this requested accommodation, this Court will be compelling Mr. Levandowski to disclose information that he shared in confidence with his lawyers under an attorney-client and common-interest privilege, in violation of Hubbell and Gonzalez. If Mr. Levandowski is forced to do so, his implicit testimony will surely be used against him later, should a criminal investigation develop.
