WHY YOU SHOULD ATTEND

Two leading universities in intellectual property law from both coasts – Georgetown Law and Stanford Law School – have joined together to host a unique conference on the role of the courts in patent law.

The focus of the conference is on the central role of the courts in shaping patent law policy. Panelists will explore perceived differences among Federal Circuit panels regarding Section 101, indefiniteness and claim construction issues. Speakers will examine the impact of litigation remedies through a discussion of NPEs, patent damages, the effect of RAND and other policies on standard-setting cases. Panelists will also take a look at key patent cases decided by the Supreme Court and the Federal Circuit in the past year and those coming in the near future.

As with our past conferences, this year's event features Federal Circuit and district court judges known for their patent expertise, thought leaders from federal agencies, leading academics, and others. It offers attendees an unmatched opportunity to learn how patent doctrine affects innovation and competition, and to explore the courts' role in shaping patent doctrine.
