23 Angeles, California, a motion will be made, and is hereby made
24 for the following relief:

25 1) That all papers, records, documents and other property
26 seized by the Government on February 25, 1965 from the home of 27 the defendant Charles Katz pursuant to search warrant be returned

14 February 19, 20, 21, 23 and 24 of conversations had by the 15 defendant within public phone booths located at 8210 Sunset Boule-
16 vard, Hollywood, California, which have phone numbers OL 4-9275
17 and OL 4-9276, which said conversations were tape recorded by 18 having microphones taped to the outside of said phone booths.

19 AND FURTHER motion will be made to suppress evidence of 20 any conversations heard by Special Agent Allen F. Frei of the 21 Federal Bureau of Investigation overheard on February 23, 1965

1) That any conversations of the defendant overheard by special agents of the FBI were obtained by a direct violation of the defendant's right to privacy and without warrant, and were therefore unlawful "searches and seizures" in violation of the defendant's rights under the Fourth Amendment to the United States.

2) That any arrest or search warrant issued upon the information obtained through the use of illegally obtained evidence is illegal and void.

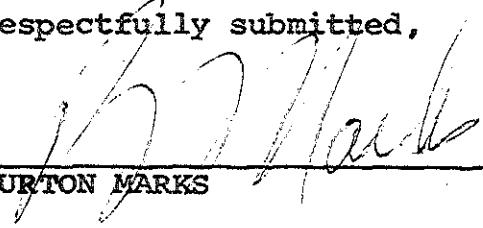

3) That the search warrant obtained was not obtained upon any probable cause and was void.

4) That the search warrant was a general search warrant and void.

5) That the search warrant was intended and used for the purpose of obtaining evidence and being an "evidentiary search warrant" is void.

DATED: March 8, 1965.

Respectfully submitted,

POINTS AND AUTHORITIES

1) THE UNLAWFUL OBTAINING OF EVIDENCE THROUGH THE AID OF LISTENING DEVICES (THE UNLAWFUL INVASION).

It is submitted that whatever vitality Olmstead vs. U.S., 277 U.S. 438, 72 Law Ed. 944, had in prior years, it is now a "dead letter" case in that electronic eavesdropping will not be countenanced by the United States Supreme Court as a violation of the Fourth Amendment. See Silverman vs. U.S., 365 U.S. 505, 5 Law Ed. 2d 734 and dissenting opinion.

Lopez vs. U.S., 373 U.S. 427, 10 Law Ed. 2d 462 (with special reference to the dissents of Justices Brennan, Douglas and Goldberg).

In 1963, the Ninth Circuit in People of the State of California vs. Hurst, 325 Fed. 2d 891, cited with approval Brock vs. U.S., 223 Fed. 2d 681 as follows:

"Whatever quibbles there may be as to where the curtilage begins and ends, clear it is that standing on a man's premises and looking in his bedroom window is a violation of his 'right to be let alone' as guaranteed by the Fourth Amendment." (325 Fed. 2d 898).

Surely a man has as much right to ^{be let} ~~be~~ alone in a private telephone booth as in his own home. Although the affidavit of agent Barron does not indicate how the conversations were overheard from the adjoining room to the defendant's apartment, it is submitted that evidence at the time of the motion will show that these conversations were also overheard through electronic eavesdropping.

It is quite obvious that if the conversations overheard and electronically recorded by special agents of the FBI were obtained in violation of the Fourth Amendment, that that evidence could not be used to establish "probable cause" for an arrest or

1 a search warrant, since such warrants would be the "fruit of
2 the poisonous tree."

3 Obviously, when an illegal search and seizure has been
4 made and conducted and the same is shown by evidence, the burden
5 of proof shifts to the Government to show probable cause for
6 such search and seizure sufficient to justify the same. (U.S.
7 vs. Paroutian, 299 Fed. 2d 486).

8 2) THE SEARCH WARRANT WAS VOID FOR TWO REASONS:

9 (A) IT WAS AN EVIDENTIARY SEARCH WARRANT, AND

10 (B) IT WAS A GENERAL SEARCH WARRANT, BOTH OF WHICH

11 ARE PROHIBITED BY THE FOURTH AMENDMENT.

12 A) A search warrant which authorizes a search for 13 evidence is illegal; it violates both the Fourth and Fifth
14 Amendments to the United States Constitution.

15 The constitutional law is unerringly to the effect
16 that a search for evidence violates these constitutional rights.
17 (See Harris vs. U.S., 331 U.S. 145, 154, especially where as here 18 the items specified in the search warrant are not the "fruits or 19 instrumentalities" of the crimes of using the wires or violation
20 of the Internal Revenue Code.

21 Recently the court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit
22 in Gilbert vs. U.S., 291 Fed. 2d 586, 596 (1961), ruled:

23 "We think we must recognize and respect

24 ' . . . the distinction between merely evidentiary
25 materials, on the one hand which may not be seized

26 . . . ' "

27 And searches for instrumentalities, contraband,
28 etc., citing Harris vs. U.S., and the court held illegally
29 seized material obtained during a lawful search, because con-
30 ducted as incident to a lawful arrest, but which were evidentiary
31 in character.

32 In Boyd vs. U.S., 116 U.S. 16, 29 Law Ed. 746, the court

1 pointed out the distinction between judicial process to seize
 2 property such as stolen goods, articles upon which duty is owed
 3 to the Government, articles seized on attachment to satisfy
 4 a debt, and the case there at bar, namely, to produce "the 5 invoice of the 29 cases" as to which the Government claimed
 6 duty was owed and which it wanted forfeited, held:

7 "It is not the breaking of his doors and
 8 the rummaging of his drawers that constitutes 9 the essence of the offense; but it is the in-
 10 vasion of his indefeasible right of personal
 11 security, personal liberty and private property,
 12 for that right has never been forfeited by his 13 conviction of some public offense; it is the 14 invasion of this sacred right which underlies
 15 and constitutes the essence of Lord Cambden's
 16 judgment. Breaking into a house and opening
 17 boxes and drawers are circumstances of aggra-
 18 vation; but any forceable and compulsory
 19 extortion of a man's own testimony or of his 20 private papers to be used as evidence to convict
 21 him of a crime or forfeit his goods is within the 22 condemnation of that judgment. In this regard
 23 the Fourth and Fifth Amendments run almost into 24 each other." (See also Gouled vs. U.S. 255 U.S.
 25 298; Carrol vs. U.S., 267 U.S. 132; Lefkowitz
 26 vs. U.S., 285 U.S. 452; U.S. vs. Rebinowitz,
 27 339 U.S. 56; Adel vs. U.S., 362 U.S. 217; Woo
 28 Lai Chun vs. U.S., 274 Fed. 2d 708 (Ninth Circuit, 29 1960).)

30 B) The "general search warrant."

31 A mere glance at the permissive scope of the search
 32 warrant and the inventory of matters and materials taken from the

1 home of the defendant dispels any doubt that the search was
2 not only "evidentiary" in nature, but that the warrant was a
3 "general" search warrant and condemned. (See Stanford vs. Texas,
4 13 Law Ed. 2d 431 (January 18, 1965).)

5 "The requirement that warrants shall parti-
6 cularly describe the things to be seized makes
7 general searches under them impossible and pre-
8 vents the seizure of one thing under a warrant
9 describing another. As to what is to be taken,
10 nothing is left to the discretion of the officer
11 executing the warrant." Marron vs. U.S., 275 U.S.
12 192, 196, 72 Law Ed. 2d 231 as cited in Stanford vs.
13 Texas, supra. at page 437.

14 It is also submitted that upon seizure of items not
15 specifically described in the warrant, assuming it were not too
16 general, the entire search must be declared invalid since the 17 validly seized items cannot be severed from the invalidly seized
18 items. See Marcus vs. Search Warrants, 367 U.S. 717, 6 Law Ed.
19 2d 1127.

20 Respectfully submitted,
