3 12. On or about January 26, 2009, Mainstream Advertising hired POONATER
4 for the position of Technical PA.

5 13. Mainstream Advertising became a wholly owned subsidiary of CHEAP
6 STUFF.

7 14. Mainstream Advertising was in the business of Web-based advertising.

8 15. Mainstream Advertising used Web-based advertising mechanisms to accept 9 requests for content and to handle those requests by returning a series of instructions to the 10 Web browser that cause the browser to make requests for various advertising content from 11 other Web servers.

12 16. Mainstream Advertising employed POONATER to write source code for 13 CHEAP STUFF and to implement business logic.

14 17. POONATER wrote the program identified as rc.php, a PHP Hypertext
15 Processor program.

16 18. The rc.php program fulfills requests for content in the form of Web requests
17 by sending “redirect” responses to the Web browser making those requests.

18 19. A “redirect” response is content that typically causes a Web browser to make
19 a subsequent request for content from a different location than the original location
20 requested.

21 20. The rc.php program uses a database that relates tags associated with a
22 “listing”, “title”, “description”, “bid”, “url”, and “redirect.”

23 21. The rc.php program goes through a list of listings determining whether and 24 to what extent they are associated with external advertisements or must be fulfilled
25 internally.

26 22. The rc.php program retrieves components of listings for locally hosted 27 content, or uses the “curl” program to gather that content from advertisers.

28 23. The rc.php program produces audit records associated with these activities.

1 24. The rc.php program checks to prevent reuse or replays of previous requests.

2 25. The rc.php program gets and assembles the relevant advertisement URLs and 3 parameters.

4 26. The rc.php program returns advertisement URLs and related information to 5 the browser that made the request as “redirect” responses.

6 27. POONATER had access to CHEAP STUFF’s bank accounts.

7 28. POONATER had code level access for CHEAP STUFF’s partners.

8 29. Mainstream Advertising had each new employee sign a confidentiality and 9 nondisclosure agreement promising that the employee will not use or disclose Mainstream
10 Advertising’s trade secrets and other proprietary information during and after his or her
11 employment with Mainstream Advertising.

12 30. On or about June 5, 2009, CHEAP STUFF and YAHOO entered in to 13 Publisher Network Contract #1-20244451 (the “Agreement”) whereby YAHOO agreed to 14 deliver to CHEAP STUFF “paid search results,” and CHEAP STUFF agreed to display
15 such paid search results. A true and accurate copy of the Agreement is attached hereto as 16 Exhibit A. Pursuant to the terms of the Agreement, YAHOO agreed to pay CHEAP
17 STUFF 75% of the gross revenue earned by YAHOO solely from the paid search results
18 shown on CHEAP STUFF’s offerings in the applicable territory within 45 days after the 19 end of the calendar month in which the relevant paid search results appeared on CHEAP
20 STUFF’s offerings. Between July 2009 and July 2012, CHEAP STUFF and YAHOO
21 executed seven amendments to the Agreement. The payment terms remained unchanged
22 from the original contract.

23 31. On or about July 15, 2010, POONATER resigned from Mainstream
24 Advertising/CHEAP STUFF to work for Microsoft Forensics team.

25 32. Plaintiffs are informed and believe, and on that basis, allege that YAHOO
26 and MICROSOFT knew or should have known that POONATER was employed by
27 CHEAP STUFF.

28 33. Plaintiffs are informed and believe, and on that basis, allege that

1 MICROSOFT'S Human Resources Department performed the background check on
2 POONATER and transferred his H1 visa from CHEAP STUFF.

3 34. YAHOO and MICROSOFT formed a joint enterprise on their search
4 network and contractually shared information pertaining to search audits, evaluations and 5 other review which included the reviews and work performed by POONATER.

6 35. The joint network is described at http://yahoobingnetwork.com/en-
7 apac/home.

8 36. In or about October 2013, CHEAP STUFF found out that POONATER had
9 stolen proprietary information in violation of the Nondisclosure and Confidentiality
10 Agreements from the company.

11 37. Plaintiffs are informed and believe, and on that basis, allege that 12 POONATER obtained trade secrets and other proprietary information of CHEAP STUFF.

13 38. Plaintiffs are informed and believe, and on that basis, allege that 14 POONATER was building an unfounded case against CHEAP STUFF in retaliation for 15 negative work reviews.

16 39. POONATER had insider knowledge of how CHEAP STUFF's mechanisms
17 for sending traffic worked.

18 40. Plaintiffs are informed and believe, and on that basis, allege that
19 POONATER was hired by MICROSOFT after he left Mainstream Advertising/CHEAP
20 STUFF.

21 41. Plaintiffs are informed and believe, and on that basis, allege that
22 POONATER disclosed CHEAP STUFF's code to MICROSOFT for purposes of damaging
23 CHEAP STUFF.

24 42. Plaintiffs are informed and believe, and on that basis, allege that 25 MICROSOFT was auditing the traffic that CHEAP STUFF sent to YAHOO during 26 relevant times of the audit.

27 43. Plaintiffs are informed and believe, and on that basis, allege that 28 POONATER performed the outcome determinative audit.

1 44. Plaintiffs are informed and believe, and on that basis, allege that
2 POONATER was one of the employees of MICROSOFT who took part in the 3 investigation of CHEAP STUFF's traffic.

4 45. Plaintiffs are informed and believe, and on that basis, allege that
5 MICROSOFT and YAHOO ultimately took the position that CHEAP STUFF's cache
6 process was fraudulent.

7 46. Plaintiffs are informed and believe, and on that basis, allege that
8 MICROSOFT did not consider other possible causes for the traffic patterns.

9 47. Plaintiffs are informed and believe, and on that basis, allege that 10 MICROSOFT did not base its conclusions on sufficient information and in fact based it on 11 a developer, POONATER, who was utilizing proprietary information which in most cases, 12 he himself designed.

13 48. POONATER was the main programmer that wrote the fraud mitigation
14 mechanism while he was working for Mainstream Advertising/CHEAP STUFF.

15 49. On November 19, 2012, YAHOO terminated its agreement with CHEAP
16 STUFF.

17 50. YAHOO sent a termination letter to CHEAP STUFF alleging/concluding 18 that CHEAP STUFF engaged in activities that violated Section 18 "Abuse of Services" of 19 the Agreement.

20 51. Pursuant to the Agreement, payment of monthly invoices by YAHOO to 21 CHEAP STUFF is due within forty-five days of receipt thereof.

22 52. CHEAP STUFF has submitted to YAHOO the following invoices for 23 services provided: $1,537,745.39 for September 2012; and $1,117,280.95 for October 24 2012. The total amount due and owing to CHEAP STUFF for the outstanding invoices is 25 $2,655,023.34. True and accurate copies of these invoices are attached hereto as Exhibit B.

26 53. CHEAP STUFF has not received payment from YAHOO for any of the 27 invoices found attached as Exhibit B.

28

1 54. Plaintiffs are informed and believe, and on that basis, allege that CHEAP
2 STUFF and YAHOO are competitors. They are both publishers of online advertising.

3 55. Plaintiffs are informed and believe, and on that basis, allege that YAHOO
4 was in a contract with MICROSOFT to display Bing search results.

5 56. Plaintiffs are informed and believe, and on that basis, allege that
6 MICROSOFT was a competitor with CHEAP STUFF.

7 57. Plaintiffs are informed and believe, and on that basis, allege that some or all
8 of the Results CHEAP STUFF obtained from YAHOO came from MICROSOFT.

9 58. While CHEAP STUFF was in a contractual relationship with YAHOO, BIBI
10 communicated on business matters with BROUS, who fostered the appearance of having 11 the power to terminate CHEAP STUFF's Agreement with YAHOO.

12 59. In mid-August of 2012, BIBI asked BROUS to set up a meeting to discuss 13 traffic quality in order to dispel concerns over CHEAP STUFF and restore trust.

14 60. Plaintiffs are informed and believe, and on that basis, allege that BROUS's
15 responsibilities at YAHOO included building relationships with partners, developing 16 partnerships, and leveraging relationships when needed.

17 61. Plaintiffs are informed and believe, and on that basis, allege that BROUS 18 would find the partners, figure out how to meet the needs, and facilitate opportunities for 19 business.

20 62. Plaintiffs are informed and believe, and on that basis, allege that even if a 21 partner contract lay outside of BROUS's authority, BROUS determined which partner to 22 terminate and his superiors were strongly influenced by his determinations.

23 63. On or about September 5, 2012, BIBI met with BROUS to make a request to 24 be cleared of the false accusations against CHEAP STUFF. YAHOO had said that,
25 regarding a previous audit, CHEAP STUFF was "completely free of HIC 22."

26 64. Seven days later, BROUS communicated to BIBI that BROUS wanted
27 CHEAP STUFF to give him at least a million dollars or else the Agreement will be 28 terminated.

1 74. The value that CHEAP STUFF obtained and could have obtained from the 2 information in keeping it secret was great. Indeed, this technology advantage was the 3 foundation on which the company was built.

4 75. The extent others could have obtained value from the information if it were 5 not secret may be that others would have been able to put CHEAP STUFF and other
6 competitors out of business.

7 76. The amount of time, money, or labor a competitor would save who used the 8 information may be up to two years to build this technology, costing the competitor 9 $300,000 in employee labor costs, and over one million dollars in research and 10 development.

11 77. Defendants' use of the trade secrets gave them a business advantage over 12 Plaintiffs.

13 78. Plaintiffs are informed and believe, and on that basis, allege that GNAYAK
14 POONATER and MICROSOFT improperly acquired the trade secrets.

15 79. Plaintiffs are informed and believe, and on that basis, allege that 16 POONATER acquired the trade secrets by breaching a duty to maintain secrecy.
17 POONATER signed a Proprietary Information and Invention Assignment Agreement with 18 Mainstream Advertising which provided that he shall not use Mainstream Advertising's
19 trade secrets and other proprietary information, nor disclose such information to anyone,
20 during his employment with Mainstream Advertising and at all times thereafter.

21 80. Plaintiffs are informed and believe, and on that basis, allege that
22 MICROSOFT and YAHOO acquired the trade secrets and knew or had reason to know
23 that POONATER used improper means to acquire them.

24 81. Plaintiffs are informed and believe, and on that basis, allege, that 25 MICROSOFT and YAHOO misappropriated CHEAP STUFF's trade secrets by 26 acquisition.

27
28

1 82. Plaintiffs are informed and believe, and on that basis, allege that
2 MICROSOFT and YAHOO and POONATER disclosed and/or used CHEAP STUFF’s
3 trade secrets without CHEAP STUFF’s consent.

4 83. Plaintiffs are informed and believe, and on that basis, allege that
5 MICROSOFT, YAHOO, and POONATER acquired and shared knowledge of the trade
6 secrets by improper means.

7 84. Plaintiffs are informed and believe, and on that basis, allege that at the time
8 of the disclosure and/or use, MICROSOFT, YAHOO and POONATER knew or had
9 reason to know that their knowledge of CHEAP STUFF’s trade secrets came from or 10 through POONATER, and that POONATER had previously acquired the trade secrets by 11 improper means.

12 85. Alternatively, Plaintiffs are informed and believe, and on that basis, allege 13 that at the time of the disclosure and/or use, MICROSOFT and YAHOO knew or had
14 reason to know that their knowledge of CHEAP STUFF’s trade secrets came from or 15 through POONATER, and that POONATER had a duty to CHEAP STUFF to keep the 16 information secret or to limit use of the information.

17 86. Plaintiffs are informed and believe, and on that basis, allege that GNAYAK
18 POONATER and MICROSOFT and YAHOO improperly used the trade secrets.

19 87. Plaintiffs are informed and believe, and on that basis, allege that GNAYAK
20 POONATER and MICROSOFT and YAHOO improperly disclosed the trade secrets.

21 88. CHEAP STUFF was harmed.

22 89. GNAYAK POONATER’s, YAHOO’s and MICROSOFT’s acquisition, use,
23 and/or disclosure was a substantial factor in causing CHEAP STUFF’s harm.

(CHEAP STUFF against Defendants MICROSOFT, GNAYAK POONATER, and DOES
1 through 100)

90. Plaintiffs incorporate by reference each and every allegation set forth hereinabove and below and repeat and re-allege such averments hereinafter with the same force and effect.

91. There was a contract between CHEAP STUFF and YAHOO embodied in the Agreement.

92. Plaintiffs are informed and believe, and on that basis, allege that since MICROSOFT was auditing CHEAP STUFF’s traffic sent to YAHOO, MICROSOFT knew of the contract.

93. Plaintiffs are informed and believe, and on that basis, allege that since POONATER helped do the auditing of CHEAP STUFF’s traffic sent to YAHOO, POONATER knew of the contract.

94. Plaintiffs are informed and believe, and on that basis, allege that POONATER played a role in the investigation of CHEAP STUFF’s traffic between August 2012 and November 2012.

2 99. Plaintiffs are informed and believe, and on that basis, allege that
3 MICROSOFT failed to present YAHOO with specific “blind” links.

4 100. Plaintiffs are informed and believe, and on that basis, allege that, in fact, the 5 slides that were created by MICROSOFT during the auditing of CHEAP STUFF’s traffic
6 do not contain evidence to support what YAHOO claimed in its November 19, 2012
7 termination letter.

8 101. Plaintiffs are informed and believe, and on that basis, allege that
9 MICROSOFT failed to give YAHOO actual logs to show the existence of “cooked” logs.

11 MICROSOFT failed to give YAHOO any information on timing or direct link between 12 items and other supporting information to show a claimed sequence of events.

13 103. Plaintiffs are informed and believe, and on that basis, allege that the 14 statements of YAHOO employees contradicted contentions by MICROSOFT that CHEAP

16 104. CHEAP STUFF hired an expert to render an opinion on whether or not
17 CHEAP STUFF engaged in the activities alleged in the November 19, 2012 termination

19 105. The expert said that the data posted by YAHOO does not show the select

THIRD CAUSE OF ACTION

BREACH OF CONTRACT

(CHEAP STUFF against Defendants YAHOO, and DOES 1 through 100)

109. Plaintiffs incorporate by reference each and every allegation set forth hereinabove and below and repeat and re-allege such averments hereinafter with the same force and effect.

110. The Agreement is a valid and enforceable contract.

111. Pursuant to the Agreement, YAHOO agreed to pay all invoices from CHEAP STUFF within forty-five days of receipt. YAHOO has breached the Agreement by failing to pay CHEAP STUFF's invoices since September 2012.

112. CHEAP STUFF has made demands for payment prior to filing this Complaint.

113. CHEAP STUFF has been damaged by this conduct in an amount to be proven at trial.

FOURTH CAUSE OF ACTION

BREACH OF IMPLIED COVENANT OF GOOD FAITH AND FAIR DEALING

(CHEAP STUFF against Defendants YAHOO, and DOES 1 through 100)

114. Plaintiffs incorporate by reference each and every allegation set forth hereinabove and below and repeat and re-allege such averments hereinafter with the same force and effect.

115. There is an implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing implied in every contract that neither party will do anything that will injure the right of the other to receive the benefits of the agreement.

116. Every contract imposes on each party a duty of good faith and fair dealing in its performance and its enforcement.

1 117. The obligation imposed by the implied covenant prevents one party from 2 frustrating the other party's enjoyment of rights provided by the contract, including the 3 right to normal business relations without subterfuges and evasions.

4 118. The precise nature and extent of the duty imposed by the covenant depends
5 on the contract and the parties' justified expectations.

6 119. The Publisher Network Contract ("Agreement") referred to above contained
7 an implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing, which obligated Yahoo to perform the 8 terms and conditions of the Agreement fairly and in good faith and refrain from doing any 9 act that would prevent or impede CHEAP STUFF from performing any and all of the 10 conditions of the contract that it agreed to perform, or any act that would deprive CHEAP
11 STUFF of the benefits of the Agreement.

12 120. Plaintiffs are informed and believe, and on that basis, allege that YAHOO
13 knew that CHEAP STUFF had fulfilled all its duties and conditions under the Agreement.

14 121. YAHOO breached the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing under 15 the Agreement by terminating, ignoring employee extortion upon CHEAP STUFF that was 16 going on, and abusing of the power to determine whether CHEAP STUFF's cache process
17 was fraudulent, intentionally, in bad faith and for reasons extraneous to the Agreement.

18 122. As a result of YAHOO's violation of said implied covenant of good faith and 19 fair dealing and its reprehensible and willful conduct, CHEAP STUFF has suffered harm 20 in:

- 21 a. the damage of CHEAP STUFF's valuable property interests in its contract 22 and business;
- 23 b. incurring of reasonable attorneys fees in its attempts to obtain the benefits
24 due to it under the above-stated contract with YAHOO;
- 25 c. substantial loss in revenues; and
- 26 d. causing BIBI, and employee of CHEAP STUFF, to suffer and continue 27 suffering depression, hopelessness, and mental anguish, all to the damage of
28 CHEAP STUFF.

1 123. As a proximate result of YAHOO's breach of the implied covenant of good
2 faith and fair dealing, CHEAP STUFF has suffered, and continues to suffer, losses in 3 revenues, and consequential economic damages to its damage in an amount to be shown
4 according to proof.

5
6 FIFTH CAUSE OF ACTION

7 INTENTIONAL INFLICTION OF EMOTIONAL DISTRESS

8 (BIBI Against Defendants YAHOO, BROUS, and DOES 1 through 100)

9 124. Plaintiffs incorporate by reference each and every allegation set forth
10 hereinabove and below and repeat and re-allege such averments hereinafter with the same
11 force and effect.

12 125. Commencing in or about May 2012, and for several months thereafter,
13 Defendant BROUS tried to force BIBI to give him money. BROUS threatened to damage
14 BIBI's business relationship with YAHOO if BIBI did not give him money.

15 126. BIBI feared that he would lose the contract with YAHOO unless he gave 16 BROUS money.

17 127. The role of the business development department in a company is usually to 18 build and maintain relationships with partners. The relationship between CHEAP STUFF
19 and YAHOO was significantly influenced by BROUS in his role on YAHOO's Business
20 Development team.

21 128. In fact, BROUS fostered the appearance of having the power to terminate
22 CHEAP STUFF's Agreement with YAHOO.

23 129. On or about September 12, 2012, BIBI told BROUS, "Please man, I have 24 employees to pay and kids to feed, don't do this to me!" Plaintiffs are informed and 25 believe, and on that basis, allege that BROUS knew that his conduct would likely result in 26 harm due to mental distress, or, alternatively, that BROUS gave little or no thought to the 27 probable effects of his conduct.

28

1 130. Plaintiffs are informed and believe that BROUS laid a trap for BIBI, and that
2 there was a conspiracy to trick and defraud BIBI.

3 131. BROUS's conduct was outrageous.

4 132. BIBI suffered anguish, nervousness, grief, anxiety, worry, shock,
5 humiliation, and shame.

6 133. BROUS's conduct was a substantial factor in causing BIBI's severe
7 emotional distress.

8 134. BROUS was YAHOO's employee.

9 135. Plaintiffs are informed and believe, and on that basis, allege that at the time
10 BIBI was harmed, BROUS was acting in the course and scope of his employment.

11
12 SIXTH CAUSE OF ACTION

13 INTENTIONAL INTERFERENCE WITH CONTRACTUAL RELATIONS
14 (CHEAP STUFF against MICROSOFT, POONATER, BROUS and DOES 1 through 100)

15 136. Plaintiffs incorporate by reference each and every allegation set forth
16 hereinabove and below, except paragraph 135, and repeat and re-allege such averments
17 hereinafter with the same force and effect.

18 137. There was a contract between CHEAP STUFF and YAHOO.
